YOUTHFUL FORGER.

William Trumbo, formerly an errand boy for the Levering Coffee Company, in Baltimore, was arrested yesterday while in the act of cashing one of a series of forged checks at the National Bank of Commerce. He had cashed checks, ten in all, aggregating nearly $4,000, and all have been pronounced rank forgeries. With the money he bought a horse and buggy, among other things. He also bought some diamonds which he was wearing with a sporty air when caught.

When taken to headquarters Trumbo said he had been given the checks by Louis Maher, also formerly employed by the coffee house. On this information the detectives also arrested Maher.

Searched at headquarters, Trumbo was found to have a lot of checks made out ready for cashing. One of them was drawn for $450; another for $62,000, and signed with the name of William J. Ewing, who is the partner of Eugene Levering, jr., in the business.

Trumbo is said to have been working the game since December 18.

Trumbo was known to the bank officials and had frequently been there on business for the firm. It was this circumstance that made it possible for him to get away with the forgeries. Yesterday morning the cashier of the bank called up the coffee house and asked Cashier Maher if he was using two forms of check blanks. He replied that he was using only the established form that had always been used. "Then come up here right away," said the cashier.

When Sam arrived he was shown the pile of checks, all of which he pronounced to be forgeries. While he was there Trumbo walked in with another one to cash. He was confronted and asked where he got the check. He said it was given to him by a man on the corner. Sam went with Trumbo to the corner, but failed to find the supposed accessory, whereupon Trumbo was arrested.

In addition to the checks, $600 in cash was found in Trumbo's possession when he was searched.

LABOR LEADERS' SALARIES.

A special report made to the convention of the United Mine Workers, in Indianapolis, Ind., by National Auditors Baker Mossop and Fitzsimmons, caused a great deal of comment among the delegates, who were surprised at the large amount paid out to officers and for expenses, these two items totaling about one-fourth of the entire receipts. The report covers the year ending November 30, last, and the salaries and expenses aggregated $211,803. The total income was $806,882.

According to the same report, the Mine Workers' Journal was published last year at a loss of $2,300.

John H. Walker, candidate for president, charged yesterday that Lewis has packed the convention with paid organizers, saying that 107 of them are present with credit titles from locals.

Congressman Wilson and Congressman Nichols, both elected from anthracite districts, addressed the convention yesterday and declared that the courts are digging up antiques and decisions and applying them to labor men.

Both Wilson and Nichols thought the presence of four labor congressmen in the House and labor's programme was producing results. Among the most gratifying, said Wilson, was the retirement of Littlefield, of Maine, and Jenkins, of Wisconsin.

ATTEMPT TO ROB DEAD WOMAN.

Accused of an attempt to steal rings from the finger of a dead girl during a wake at the home of John Werner in Philadelphia, Mary Dougherty was yesterday held in $1,000 bail for trial. John Smith, suspected of being the woman's accomplice, was also held.

Early in the evening the woman asked if she might view the body. She was permitted to do this, and then left the house. An hour elapsed, and the woman reappeared, this time accompanied, by John Smith.

"May I look at the right hand?" Smith asked. He took the right hand in his own, regarded it carefully, then allowed it to drop.

A few minutes later Mary Dougherty took up the hand that Smith had dropped. Stabbingly, it is alleged, she started to remove the rings that were upon it.

"Stop that! What are you doing?" cried Rose Werner, a sister of Lewis, the dead girl. The woman, covered with confusion, endeavored to make an explanation, which was cut short by the arrival of a policeman, who arrested her and her companion.

BECAUSE OF WAYWARD DAUGHTER.

Charles E. Smith, millionaire planter of Artesia, Miss., was placed on preliminary trial yesterday for the murder of Eugene A. Laurent, of Nashville, Tenn., a traveling man in the employ of a St. Louis hardware firm. Laurent, it is charged, was shot in the stomach when in the act of extending his hand to Smith at Artesia.

Smith told how the only daughter of his dead wife had been ruined. He admitted the killing, but claimed self-defense. At the end he was ordered to jail without bond.

Eddie Smith, the daughter, dressed in a fluffy frock and merry widow hat, took the witness stand yesterday. Her father had just told his tale. But Miss Smith was silent. She broke down at the end and sobbed bitterly, pointing to her father with a declaration: "Dad's the only friend I have left in the world."

Judge Mithews excused her from the stand. There was not a dry eye in the courtroom.
